

My concept for the final project is a Google Doodle, in which each of the letters is an image of tea that resembles it. For example, a teapot for the large uppercase "G". Each of these letters will fade into a tea-related image when scrolled over. I plan to include descriptions of the many cultural importances of tea. For example, in China, tea was originally used as a medicine. Each scroll-over letter could include a different fact. All of these facts and the doodle could be used to commemorate the International Day of Tea, celebrated on May 21st. Tea is used to bring people together all over the world, and Google is an international entity, so this would help to engage many different users who all share something in common. In addition, it offers some fun facts about a beverage many enjoy for various reasons.
